BERLIN

History & Energy

Berlin is Germany's capital and a living laboratory of history. You can walk along theremains of the Berlin Wall, descend into former bunkers under the Tiergarten, or dive into the past at the Stasi Museum and the Humboldt Forum.

But Berlin is not just history – the city feels raw and restless, full of neighborhoods that each have their own character: Kreuzberg with its street art and kebab shops, Friedrichshain with bars and clubs that go until morning, Prenzlauer Berg with cafés and jazz. Everyday life here has its own rhythm – a mix of Spätis on every corner, markets, and constant movement. Food is both iconic and international: Currywurst and Döner are staples, while cuisines from around the world mirror the city's diversity. Berlin rarely stands still – and that's part of its charm.

MUNICH

Culture & Nature

Munich, by contrast, feels like the opposite. Bavarian culture is visible everywhere – from the Viktualienmarkt and traditional beer gardens to the lanes of the old town.

Yet the real attraction lies in the closeness to nature. In just 30–60 minutes you can reach lakes such as Tegernsee or Schliersee, perfect for hiking, cycling, or paddling. Even within the city, nature is never far: the English Garden is one of the largest inner-city parks worldwide.

Munich is, however, more expensive than Berlin, and in winter excursions into the Alpine foothills depend on the weather.

RECOMMENDATION FOR YOU

IIf you are fascinated by history and want the buzz of a restless metropolis, Berlin is the right choice.

If one or two days of city life are enough and you value quick access to nature alongside culture, Munich is the better fit – the heart of southern Germany.
